

Elnaz Rezaee 98411387

The reasons:

- Dimensionality reduction may lead to some amount of data loss. therefore, accuracy is compromised.
- Removing necessary variables reduces accuracy, and removing non-correlated variables increases accuracy. If we don't have many data points, we probably remove essential data and lose much information.
- While doing dimensionality reduction, we lost some of the information, which can possibly affect the performance of subsequent training algorithms.